10 Ways to Teach Your Children Humility

Author GK Chesterton said, Humility, gives a person proper perspective. Here's 10 ways to teach your children how to be humble:

- 1. Modelling - Never underestimate the power of teaching through example. Humility must be consistently modeled as a lifestyle, not an on-again, off-again example.
- 2. Build them up - It's important to understand that humility always comes from a position of belief, strength, and self-assurance.
- 3. Encourage and help them to be the very best they can be no matter what they do - Humility works best when your child has actually achieved something. Help your child achieve with confidence.
- 4. Make sure they understand where their real value comes from - It's easier to sidestep pride or arrogance when children understand that they are valued simply because they are your child. Children need to know that achievements, looks, and abilities are not what give them worth.
- 5. Never humiliate your kids - Humility cannot be imposed. It's important not to confuse humiliation with an education in humility.
- 6. Expose your child to the great teachers and their stories - Jesus, Mother Teresa, and Eric Liddell are all wonderful role models. For Jesus, there are lots of great children's books about him, as well as about Mother Teresa. Eric Liddell is the man who inspired the movie, Chariots of Fire, a great film for your whole family.
- 7. Teach them to serve. Serve the homeless. Serve the poor. Serve their family. Serve one another,
- 8. Coach them on how to respond - Kids need to be taught to say, "please" and "thank you" as much as they need to be taught to brush their teeth. So why expect them to know humility without guidance?
- 9. Teach them how to apologise - The well-timed and sincere apology is a key component of humility. Sometimes they're wrong; they need to acknowledge that. Sometimes they overreach and it's time to back up. Sometimes, they receive unintentional consequences they need to smooth over.
- 10. Teach them to give thanks - A genuinely grateful heart is a key building block for humility. Gratitude, practiced and eventually owned, enhances humility at every turn. The person saying "thank you" affects a posture that is unassuming and modest.

PE Kit

Mrs Taylor has decided to change the colour of the school PE t-shirts due to white being a very difficult to keep clean and when the children are at sporting events they are not so easily identifiable. Clubsport are now selling red PE t-shirts, if you have recently purchased a white PE t-shirt your child will still be able to continue to wear it until it needs replacing.
